Grinding is Paue.

The Hawaiian Commercial and Sugar Company's big mill at Pounene blew her whistle long and loud at eight o'clock Tuesday evening to announce the completion of the grinding of her crop for the season.

The tonnage of cane ground was 360,629 which included that of the Kihel Plantation Co. the latter being 28,269.

The tonnage of sugar will be reported as soon as completed which will be some time next week. It will probably be somewhere about 44,000 tons.

Many Confirmed at the Church of the Good Shepherd.

Sunday was a read letter day at the church of the Good Shepherd. There was a large congregation at the 10 o'clock service which was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Hall, and before 11 o'clock the seating capacity of the church was taxed to the utmost. Mr. Hall presided at the organ at the late service and played as a prelude the "March of the Priests" by Mendelssohn. Then the choir came in at the main entrance and proceeded ed to the chancel singing a stirring processional hymn. At its close, the Bishop sat in his chair before the altar, and the rector, the Rev. Mr. Ault began the confirmation service, and presented to the Bishop a class of 21 persons to receive the Apostolic rite of the Laying on of Hands. The Bishop then asked the solemn question of the candidates, calling each by name, and each answered in clear tones "I do." Then the candidates knelt before the Bishop while he placed his hands on their heads and prayed that they might be defended and would grow in grace unto their lives' end. After the confirmation followed Holy Communion, the Bishop being the celebrant. The Bishop preached a powerful and practical sermon from the text, "And the disciples were first called Christians at Antioch." His theme was "Character." The true Christian is one who not only makes the Christian profession, but, more than that, one who endeavors to live the Christ life. It was a ringing call of action.

The rector is to be congratulated in preparing and presenting so large a class for confirmation.

When Schmitz was Sentenced.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 9.—"Eugene E. Schmitz," said Judge Dunne in a low voice, leaning over his desk and glancing from time to time at a sheet of notes, while the convicted Mayor stood to receive sentence, "the court in pronouncing judgment has but brief comment to make. The verdict of the jury in this case has a deeper significance than ordinary attaches to a finding of guilt. It is a message to all the people that in the city of San Francisco law and order are supreme. That no man, no matter how exalted his station or how strong and powerful the political, social and financial influences which surround him, is above the law."

"Eugene E. Schmitz, you have heretofore occupied the highest office which the city of San Francisco could confer on one of its citizens. You were elevated to that position because of the confidence and trust reposed in you by the mass of the people."

Schmitz had been rocking on his feet slightly, he withdrew his left hand from his pocket and swayed toward the court. "I am here to receive sentence and not to be subjected to the humiliation of a lecture which the newspapers will copy and repeat," he broke out in a clear voice.

"I object, your honor, to this cruel and unusual punishment," interrupted Metson.

Judge Dunne turned on the attorney sharply. "If you interrupt these proceedings again, Mr. Metson, I will send you to jail. You would be in far better business if you were here begging a day in court to answer the charge that you willfully and improperly sought to tamper with a witness in this case."

"I am ready to answer now or at any other time any charge that may be lodged against me," replied Metson simply, and then relapsed into prudent silence.

Judge Dunne turned again to Schmitz. "You have by your willful, criminal act, so a jury of your fellow citizens has declared, broken that confidence and betrayed that trust."

Schmitz was angry; he winced, but his voice was still strong. "With all due respect to the court I ask that you sentence me and not lecture me," he said in deep tones.

The court paused but for a moment. "Therefore, it may be said," he went on, "that the penalty which the law permits in this case is insufficient to meet the demands of justice."

It was apparent then to every one that Judge Dunne would inflict the maximum penalty on the prisoner. Schmitz said nothing, but stood uneasily.

"It may be suggested however," Judge Dunne continued in a higher tone, "that by your conviction you will lose the respect and esteem of all good men, that you will suffer the humiliation of knowing that your career of hypocrisy, duplicity and dishonesty—"

This moved Schmitz to passion. He made an imploring gesture toward the judge. "I am here as an American citizen demanding my rights and have not asked any leniency at your hands," he cried, his voice loud, but trembling. "I ask that your honor do your duty and proceed with the sentence. If your honor has any self respect you will pass sentence without subjecting me to any further humiliating and degrading remarks which newspapers will repeat."

The tone of the man expressed torture, but he killed the sympathy which might have arisen by his touch of injured vanity.

"It is not unusual," said Dunne, sneaking without reference to his notes. "For a court to be brought in contact with acts of brazen effrontery such as yours at the present moment is. In such cases it is, however, the duty of the court to view such acts with patience and toleration, not to say with pity."

Then reading from his manuscript the court continued:

"Your career of hypocrisy, duplicity and dishonesty has been exposed and you stand before those who believed in you, naked, shamed and disgraced."

"I deny that," shouted Schmitz, recovering his swagger. "I deny that the people of San Francisco know how I was railroaded through."

Judge Dunne paid no attention to the outburst and concluded briefly.

"It is in the knowledge of these things rather than in any mere term of imprisonment in a state penitentiary that the full measure of your punishment will be found. It is the judgment of this court that you be confined in San Quentin prison for a term of five years."

Then applause broke out. It did not start in one quarter, but was general, spontaneous, and among the crowd there was no one to champion the fortunes of the sentenced Schmitz.

Faithful was on his feet menacing the court, with his hand. "You could stop that," he shouted over the uproar.

"Throw them out," yelled Sheriff O'Neill to his bailiffs, and Judge Dunne ordered the courtroom cleared.
